

- what do I want to learn or understand better?

I did not work on the UI this week but was trying to take a look at the work of those who were, so I could get some feel for it. I have only done a tiny bit of designing in Android so there's a lot I want to learn about that. Next week will be fairly UI-focused so there might be some opportunity then. I instead worked on the back-end and now have a good understanding of how to create callbacks which I find valuable.

- how can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?

Next week some of us who have not really worked on the UI-design will probably work in that area. The other way around is also true - those who have mainly worked on the UI will need to connect it correctly to the back-end. I think we can help each other a lot there.

- what is my contribution towards the team's use of Scrum?

Same as last week, I have participated in all our scrum meetings, daily checkups, and created user stories and all things that entails. I was PO along with Emelie this week as well which meant that we conducted the demo for our client and discussed how we will be moving forward.

- what is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?

I completed all my user stories and participated in all meetings as well as contributing to the team reflection.