Individual Reflection – Week 7

Amanda Cyrén

What do I want to learn or understand better?

In my previous individual reflection I mentioned that I would like to get a better understanding about our applications backend, and in this sprint I feel like I have somewhat accomplished this. Together with Emma I have worked on repopulating the views in our app with the data stored in the model, and since Emma previously have worked a lot more with the backend, she has kindly explained some of the logic to me. For our last sprint I would like to learn how to implement push notifications in our app and make these notifications behave as desired. I will read up on the subject online and discuss with my team members on how to achieve this.

How can I help someone else, or the entire team, to learn something new?

As we begin to approach the end of the project, I think that our main goal besides delivering a shippable product, is to reflect on our work process and how we can learn from it. By sharing my thoughts and listen to my team members, I hope that I can contribute to this.

What is my contribution towards the team's application of Scrum?

I've attended all scrum related team meetings and contributed to the sprint planning, sprint review, sprint retrospective and team reflection. I have also delivered my assigned user story.

What is my contribution towards the team's deliveries?

Same as the previous question. I have worked on repopulating the views in our application with the data stored in the backend, so if a user steps forward or backward in the survey, their previously answered questions will still be shown in the GUI as expected.
